Quick Start in 5 Minutes

1. Measure first. Measure your dog's neck, then allow space for two fingers under the collar. Pick the right size before the first walk - XS, S or M.

2. Fit it snugly. The collar should sit comfortably, not loose and not tight. It should stay in place when your dog moves and plays.

3. Press the button. Try the 3 modes - steady, slow flash, fast flash - and pick the one you like best for tonight's walk.

4. Check the glow. Step into a darker room or outside at dusk and look from a distance. That is what a driver will see.

5. Keep it by the door. Hang the collar by the leash, so every evening walk starts bright - no searching, no forgetting.

Idea 1: The 5 PM Walk Routine

When the clocks go back, 5 PM is suddenly night. Make the evening walk a little ritual you both look forward to.

Put the collar on by the door, pick your mode, and take the same friendly route for the first few nights. Your dog learns the routine fast - collar on means walk time.

Tip: Walk on the side of the road where drivers can see you both, and keep the glowing collar on the side facing traffic. A bright collar plus a calm, steady pace is the safest combination.

Idea 2: Be Seen in the City

City streets at dusk are beautiful - and busy. Cars, bikes, scooters and other walkers are all moving at once.

Use the fast-flash mode on busy streets, so the glow catches the eye. Switch to steady light on a quiet side street, if you prefer a softer glow.

This is the walk the collar was made for: a dark-coloured dog that is hard to see becomes a bright, moving light that drivers notice from far away.

Idea 3: The Park After Dark

An evening park walk is calmer than a daytime one - fewer crowds, cooler air, and more space to sniff and explore.

Let your dog enjoy the grass and the smells, and keep an eye on the glow. In an open park, a bright collar helps you find your dog in the dark in seconds.

Tip: Bring a small treat pouch and practice recall in the park. Call your dog, reward, repeat. A bright collar makes training after dark much easier to follow.

Idea 4: Snowy Nights and Winter Walks

Snow makes everything quieter and brighter at once - and it gets dark so early in winter.

A glowing collar stands out beautifully against white snow, and it helps other walkers and drivers spot your dog long before they are close.

After a snowy walk, wipe the collar dry and store it indoors. And remember: no waterproof claim is made for this collar, so do not wear it while bathing or swimming.

Idea 5: Christmas Lights and Holiday Walks

December evenings are made for this collar. Walk past the Christmas lights, the shop windows and the decorated houses - your dog will be the brightest light on the street.

Take a photo (or two) on the way. A glowing collar against Christmas lights makes a lovely holiday picture, and a sweet memory of this winter.

Tip: Keep walks a little shorter on very cold nights, especially for puppies and small dogs, and warm up together when you get home.

Idea 6: A Puppy's First Night Walks

If your puppy is new to evening walks, start gently. Short walks, familiar streets, and lots of praise.

Let the puppy get used to the collar at home first - a few minutes indoors, with treats and play, before the first night walk.

Keep the pace slow and stop often to sniff. Puppies learn the world through their nose, and a calm first night walk builds confidence for every walk after it.

Idea 7: Two Dogs, Two Collars

Walking two dogs at night? Give each dog their own glowing collar - one in Pink, one in Blue, so you can tell them apart at a glance, even in the dark.

That is why many pet parents order a second collar: one for each dog, or one to keep as a spare by the door.

Tip: Use the same mode on both collars on busy roads, so drivers see two bright lights moving together, not one.

Idea 8: A Calm Evening, Together

A night walk is not only exercise - it is your time together. No phone, no rush, just you and your dog, walking through the quiet evening.

After the walk, take the collar off, wipe it clean, and hang it by the door for tomorrow. A small routine, done every night, keeps the habit easy.

And on the nights you feel tired, remember why you walk: a happy, healthy dog, a clear head for you, and a little bright light in the dark, every single evening.
